Liberty celebration slated

Hamner resigned in October 1967 and the Rev. William Fisher was pastor with an annual salary of $200.

By 1873 40 new members were added to the church by Baptism, two by letter, two by restoration and "one by experience." In that annual report to the Baptist Association that year, Liberty reported a total membership of 202. By this time, all blacks had united with other churches.

When the Rev. Luther Rice Thornhill became pastor in December of 1875, the church seemed to take on new life. An arrangement was worked out with Rehoboth Baptist Church so that they could have preaching services two Sundays a month. When Thornhill resigned after nine years, the church was in "quite a prosperous condition."

In 1877 Liberty had 233 members, ten Sunday School teachers and a Sunday School enrollment of 54.

The years rolled by, sites changed, buildings became larger and more modern and efficient. The enrollment grew and the activities of the church enlarged. Each pastor brought with him his special talent for promoting growth and development of the church.

Over the years, missionary organizations became a part of the church activities as Liberty reached out in service to the community.

The church history committee with J. Robert Jamerson and his wife Vickie, as co-chairmen, has worked long and hard collecting facts, digging into records in order to compile a history of the church that is both interesting and accurate. It tells of the progress of Liberty from the earliest beginning to the present day facility. The book will be available on Sunday, August 12.

On Sunday, former pastors, former members and friends will join the more than 700 active members (out of a total membership of approximately 1,030) in a day of celebraton and praise.

Eye excited about job

Eye's hobbies are collecting bells, cutlery, and jogging with her husband and Muffin. Muffin is the neighborhood canine who is owned by five families since he was dropped off one day.

"The Olympics serve as a unifying force for the United States of America to provide 'ide among countries that participate," Eye expressed she is proud to see the bodies of athletes in perfect tone.

Eye is married to Mr. Bruce Eye and they have two children, David, 24, and Susan, 20. David is a graduate of William and Mary and is a first lieutenant in the Army. Suzan is a sophomore at William and Mary College, "following in her brother's footsteps," says Eye.
